Injuries	Full range of injuries that could be suffered through playing the game	Female players	5	4	20	Rugby is a highly physical sport and the probability of suffering an injury is likely. Physios are always in place during the playing of the game who are also first aid trained. A stretcher is available and a defibrillator is on hand. The players are insured under the RFU scheme. All players who participate must be registered as full playing members as per the juniors section arrangements. Players to be coached correctly in the playing of the game by qualified coaches and games to be officiated by qualified referees. No wearing of jewellery, piercings or long finger nails. There is no difference as to how the game should be played from male to female. Players play at their own risk.	5	3	15
